

User Scenario

MAURICIO RUIZ

Mauricio Ruiz, 20, currently unemployed, needs a reliable and trustworthy way to financially prepare for his upcoming emigration from Venezuela to Portugal, including ways to search for housing prices and average living costs in different locations, in order to get a better of how much strain he would be putting on his family, whom he is financially dependent on.

Mauricio has always wanted to pursue his academic studies abroad and has recently been preparing to do so. Uncertain about how much this would affect his family's financial situation, he has been researching living costs, but most of the information he knows has come from his family and friends, as he finds these sources the most trustworthy. He is most curious about the amount of money he would need to spend on housing expenses, as it varies highly from area to area, and also because he wants to know how much a potential scholarship would need to cover and if he would need to get a part-time job. He believes that there should be an easier way to not only find how much rent and other living expenses vary by area.

